BSL gives $300,000 to district schools

BY JACQUI COCHRAN
Bay St. Louis Mayor Eddie Favre announced Tuesday the city will give $300,000 of their gaming revenues to the Bay-Waveland School District.
Favre said, the school board will soon prepare the 1993-94 budget, where the $300,000 will be added to the ad valorem tax figure.
He added, it is estimated the district will also receive $250,000 to $300,000 in ad valorem taxes from the casino for 1993, which will also be included in the 1993-94 budget.
The mayor stated, the monies will be earmarked for spending on teachers' salaries, classroom supplies and equipment needs.
Teachers now receive about $25 each for classroom supplies for the year. They will share an additional $110,000.
Favre said, depending on whether they pool funds to purchase more expensive equipment such as computers, or whether they spend the monies on individual classroom needs, each class should have approximately $700 more in available funds.
Both certified and non-certified employees will share in the nearly $200,000.
Favre said the district presently employs 140 certified and 109 non-certified positions.
He spoke of division of the funds as: $105,000 — certified; $55,000 — non-certified; and $30,000 — FICA/retirement match.

Bond issue to finance Magic hotel/golf course

BY JACQUI COCHRAN
The county board of supervisors agreed Monday to sponsor a proposed bond issue which could give Casino Magic up to $100 million for the construction of a hotel and golf course complex.
Mardi Gras Casino Corporation attorney and board of directors member Roger Frommelt reported, the bond issue would be paid by the corporation to the county, and should any problem occur, the casino property would be transferred to county ownership.
He said, Merchant Capital Corporation would be the holder of the bonds.
Board attorney Gerald Gex stated, "This is no different than what the county did for Alcan (Cable Company, Bay St. Louis)."
Frommelt commented, "The hotel will contain a minimum of 150 rooms, but what we are really looking at, is about 700."
Board president Mike Lader stated, "This is going to offer

'One big happy family'
First grade students of North Bay Elementary School thrilled their audience Monday at Bay High auditorium with an original production called "One Big Happy Family." Under the patient direction of North Bay music teacher Alfred H. Sheppard, performances addressed the issues of sibling relations, appreciation of parents and family members, parental quality time, and achievement stimulation. In simple words and songs, the children said it all, bringing audience members to a roaring standing ovation. (Echo staff photo by Jacqui Cochran)

HHS nixes exam exemption policy

BY LIZ HAAS
Superintendent Myrna Bourgeois announced Monday Hancock High School will remove the exam exemption from the school board manual for next school year.
The policy, approved by the school board, has been in effect for the past two years was criticized by volunteer instructor John Kolodziej as encouraging mediocrity.
"The school sent out a questionnaire and the consensus was the students, teachers, administrators and principals wanted the exam exemption policy deleted," said Bourgeois.
The policy, geared to improve school attendance, states students in grades 7 to 12 may be exempt from any examination in a class where they have at least a C grade point average, no more than two days absences prior to the day of the exam and a mastery of 90 percent of basic course skill requirements.
INJUNCTION
The board will file an injunction against the Picaune Municipal School District for the recovery of 16th section lands.
The board took the action in an effort to regain the Hancock County School District land located in the John C. Stennis Space Center buffer zone.
The land was released to Picaune more than 20 years ago when children residing in that area opted to relocate to school there. There are no longer any students there, so the board wants to reclaim their property.
BUCCANEER LEASE
The board approved to file for re-negotiation or cancellation of the 16th section 'Buccaneer Park' lease with the State of Mississippi.
The board had entered into a 99-year lease with the state in early 1970, but that type of lease no longer exists. It was to be decided if the lease is valid by

Search still on for cheaper sand

BY JACQUI COCHRAN
The lure of twice as much for the same price, has the Hancock County Board of Supervisors seeking outside assistance in obtaining Corps of Engineer approval for use of sand located along the Hancock County shoreline.
In January, the county approved sand borings 700 to 1,700 feet from shore between St. Charles Street and Bay Oaks Drive in Bay St. Louis, along with samples 1,500 to 2,100 feet from shoreline fronting Buccaneer State Park.
At that time, the sand was deemed "good and plentiful" from both areas by Sand Beach Renourishment Project engineer Bill Mitchell.
Monday, Mitchell reported the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers requested a safety plan from the county in late February, remembering a lawsuit which involved several drownings in front of Gulfstate Assembly Methodist Church in Waveland.
Sand Beach Advisory Committee chairman John Scaife added, the drownings occurred following a 1965 federal dredging project in that area.

Al-Anon

Reaching those affected by alcoholics

BY LIZ HAAS
EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the final in a three-part series dealing with the self-help and support programs available to those suffering from alcohol dependency or those affected by someone else's drinking.
Mary (not her real name), who has 12 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren, has lived with the disease of alcoholism all her life.
Her father was an alcoholic and she has been married to an alcoholic for the past 55 years.
"I'm surrounded by alcoholism. Everyone in my family is either living with the disease or are alcoholics themselves," she said.
"When I was young, I wanted to be anywhere but home," she said, "You lose trust when you grow up in an alcoholic home because of all the broken promises."
She knew her husband drank before she married him, but thought she could stop him. She repeatedly tried and failed to manipulate and control him.

Since her marriage in 1937, Mary has left her husband several times, but always came back.
"Sometimes I just had to get away, but it was not what I wanted to do," she said, "I would miss him and go back home."
Mary said she was obsessed with her husband's drinking and thought she could control it. He never promised her to stop drinking.
"After many years of this, I was at my wits end and felt alone and a loss inside of me. I opened up the paper and it was like it jumped out at me—Al-Anon meetings. I'd never heard of it before, but knew this was something I needed," she said.
Al-Anon is a fellowship of friends and relatives of alcohol-

Waveland slates Red Cross blood drive

Waveland is hosting an American Red Cross blood drive Wednesday, April 14 from 2-7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall located on Coleman Avenue in Waveland.

The support of the community is needed, and all eligible donors are asked to support this drive to increase this region's blood collections. The American Red Cross Blood Services, Gulf Coast Region, provides 100 percent of the blood supply to 48 hospitals in 26 counties. To meet patient needs in these hospitals, the Gulf Coast Region must collect 265 units of blood each weekday. In South Mississippi, Hancock Medical Center, Garden Park, Memorial Hospital at Gulfport, Biloxi VA, Biloxi Regional, Ocean Springs, Singing River and George County Infirmary are all 100 percent dependent on the American Red Cross for blood supplies.

The only way to assure that blood is available when needed is for people to donate blood in a quantity that at least meets local needs. Less than four percent of the eligible population donates blood in a given year, however, 10 times that amount (40 percent) meet age, weight and health requirements. Often people will say they will donate blood if someone they know needs it or if it is an emergency. However, if someone they care for needs blood, and they decide to donate, that unit will not be available to the patient until 72 hours later. By that time the patient could die. The real emergency occurs when someone needs blood and the blood is not on the hospital shelf. All blood types are needed daily, however, O negative types are in demand more than others. O negative blood can be transfused to any patient in an emergency when there is no time to determine blood type. The rarest type blood is the one which isn't available for those in need.

Persons 17 years or older weigh at least 110 pounds and are in good health are asked to give blood, at the Waveland Community Blood Drive on Wednesday, April 14 at the American Legion Hall.

Trinity Marine awarded $5.9 million Navy contract

The Navy has awarded Trinity Marine Group, Gulfport, a $5.9 million contract to construct equipment for the Navy's new Strategic Sealift program. The ramps will be folded and unfolded to accept vehicles on the sideport and stern sides of each sealift ship. Trinity will build both the ramps and the mechanisms needed to operate the self-contained equipment. The ramps will be used to roll on and roll off tanks, jeeps and other military hardware.

The contract is for the procurement of up to 20 shipsets for the Strategic Sealift program. Each shipset consists of one sideport ramp-system and one slewing stern ramp.

The Navy proposed the Strategic Sealift program to assure combat forces were resupplied properly after a mobilization. None of the sealift ships have been built yet, however, contracts are expected to be awarded by November.

The total in bills is going to be around $3,500. Those wishing to assist the family may call Mickie or Joyce Cuevas at 467-0826 or write to 410 St. John Street in Bay St. Louis, MS 39520.

In Memoriam

In Loving Memory of
OLLIE NELSON
Died April 8, 1992
Mother.

The night that God called you home, one year ago today, left pain in all our hearts.

It hurt us to have to let you go, but we know this was what you wanted. You told all of us that you were ready to go because you wanted to go on to Heaven to be with Daddy and Grandma.

There are times when each one of us needs you to talk to, personally, and it breaks our hearts that we can't, but we know that you are in a much better place.

God is where you told us you were ready to go, to "Heaven." Someday you and Daddy will be reunited. Your family together again. Your friends smiling face. Your small, young girl, you were so beautiful and you still are. We love you.

For those who love you who are still here, we are blessed by your memory. We love you.

tally and something that helped me physically with the anxiety I had.

"The first thing I learned was that I didn't cause the disease; I can't cure the disease, and I am learning to let go of the control of things that are beyond my control," she said.

She said she began to live instead of merely exist, and began to enjoy each day of her life.

"I had been in denial so long about my husband's drinking, but I could finally accept it when I joined Al-Anon.

"I was in the program for six months. He didn't know, but noticed the change in me because I got off his back some," she said.

Mary said through Al-Anon, she was able to find herself, what she was about and gained self-esteem. Her attitude of wanting to control everyone in her life changed and she learned to act instead of react.

She said, "I know I have to be realistic—there's going to be problems, but it's the way I handle them that matters."

"It made me realize that I do have choices. Before, I never knew I did," she said. "I learned that I don't have to accept that unacceptable way."

"I can relate to him now, before I thought I could change him, but now I know I can't," she said.

"Alcoholism is a disease of denial and the alcoholic is obsessed with the compulsion to drink," said Mary.

She said, "With the disease, alcoholics don't want to be that way, but they can't help it."

"Now I have to live with the progression of the disease in my husband's life, and it is hard, but I know I have no control," she said.

"I don't blame myself for his not finding recovery," she said. "No matter what I did, he did not want the program."

She said out of guilt, she overly protected her five daughters.

"In the alcoholic home, you just don't talk about things that happen relating to the alcoholic's behavior, and the children grow up thinking they're to blame because they do not understand. No one explains it to them.

"Before, I was frustrated and blamed myself for everything. I suffered with guilt; I was constantly condemning myself. When I found the program, I found that I was a person that was capable of warmth, compassion and love," she said.

"I think my children enjoy me more since my attitude has changed because I'm more in control of my own life," she said.

Now her daughters, although not in the program, are learning to let go, she said.

"I think it's because of my changed attitude," she said. "I'm not always worrying about things I can't control."

"I have more open communication with my children and I have let them live their lives. I have come to realize that I can't make them happy and this has brought us closer," she said.

"When I think back I see how much better my life is today. I was so down and lonely. I don't have the self-pity anymore," she said.

She said, "I know where I want to be today and I continue to enjoy life, take care of myself, live life and not try to live my husband's life for him."

"Before, I had myself at the bottom of the list. I wanted to take care of everyone else and control their lives," she said.

Mary said she is in the program to help herself.

"At first I wanted my children to feel the peace, contentment and happiness I experienced, so I pushed it on them, but I don't do that anymore. I don't even ask them to go," she said.

Mary said she does not blame her parents, husband or anyone else for her problems, she realizes that she has to be responsible for herself.

She said, "My husband is a fantastic man, he's just an alcoholic. He's charming, witty and intelligent and I love him dearly."

She said alcoholics are not bad people—they're suffering.

"The program is a process, a philosophy of life that can only help you," she said. "It works because of the sharing, knowing we're not alone and that we're with people who've been through the same and can share with us."

"In Al-Anon, our main purpose is to help the people who are hurting in alcoholic situations and we stress anonymity and honesty," she said.

People who want the help offered by this program are encouraged to attend Al-Anon meetings on Monday at 8 p.m., Tuesday at 11 a.m. and Friday at 8 p.m. at the Rebels Club at 300 Third Street in Bay St. Louis. For additional information, contact 467-6488 or the 24-hour hotline at 467-8556.

Bay-Waveland school board approves handbook changes

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

The Bay-Waveland School Board approved changes in the School Emergency Plan Monday while reviewing wording and procedures in the athletic handbook.

The School Emergency Plan addresses procedures to be followed in cases of: intrusion, vandalism, weapon possession, drug possession or use, gangs and groups, and transportation safety.

Life safety issues connected to natural disasters, fires, technological disasters and bomb incidents; and

General prevention strategies relating to medical emergencies and epidemic/health hazards are discussed as well as deaths and suicides.

The plan is a basic handbook for administrative and staff personnel and addresses board policies as well as defining lines of authority and responsibility.

Changes in the athletic handbook were given to Superintendent Paul Tisdale for approval at the next board meeting.

Tisdale reported he is waiting on quotes concerning proposed computer curriculum purchases, placing on hold any further discussion of a planned computer updating for the district.

The board entered executive session of the purpose of superintendent evaluation. No action was taken and the board adjourned until April 12.

Frommelt mentioned the 10-year ad valorem tax exempt incentive offered by the county to businesses.

Gex said, if applied for by Casino Magic, the tax exemption would begin when the hotel and golf course complex are complete and ready for business.

He added, school taxes would still be applicable.

District 2 supervisor Alton "Dolph" Keller commented, "I know of no one we have denied (the tax incentive)."

Gex stressed, the bond issue has no connection to the gaming facility, addressing only the hotel and golf course complex as under a routine industrial development bond.

March 29, Casino Magic entered into contract with the Arnold Palmer Group for construction of an Arnold Palmer Academy, 27-hole golf course and 18-hole putting course at the former Bay Cove Marina grounds.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

As I drove down Beach Boulevard Tuesday morning, I really got an urge to go fishing. Of course, work comes first.

The water was calm, appeared to be clearing up, and I have a feeling there should be a few specks and redfish around.

I understand some are now being caught along the shoreline.

I won't be long before I hope to 'wet a line,' as an old saying goes.

Traffic has really increased on our highways and roadways.

This past weekend looked like we were at mid-summer form.

As motorists, we are not accustomed having to wait a couple light changes to cross an intersection.

If the rate of traffic continues to increase, it will really be hard to travel around come summer time.

I have noticed several road counters placed about the area, and I am told new traffic counts are being taken.

One of the things motorists have to do now is give themselves a little more time to travel from one point to another.

I know a lot of parents and students are concerned about our school year coming to an end within a few weeks.

There are also parents who have to be concerned about their five-year-olds who will be entering kindergarten this fall.

Registrations in all of the Hancock County school districts will be April 23, and May 14 for kindergarten students.

Kindergarten students must be five years of age before September 1, 1993.

A parent or guardian should bring a certified copy of the child's birth certificate, proof of residence in the school district, Compliance Slip (blue slip), either from the local health department or a private physician, and the child's social security number.

Children sure need to get a social security card early these days.

Best of luck to our kindergarten students in the class of 1993-94.

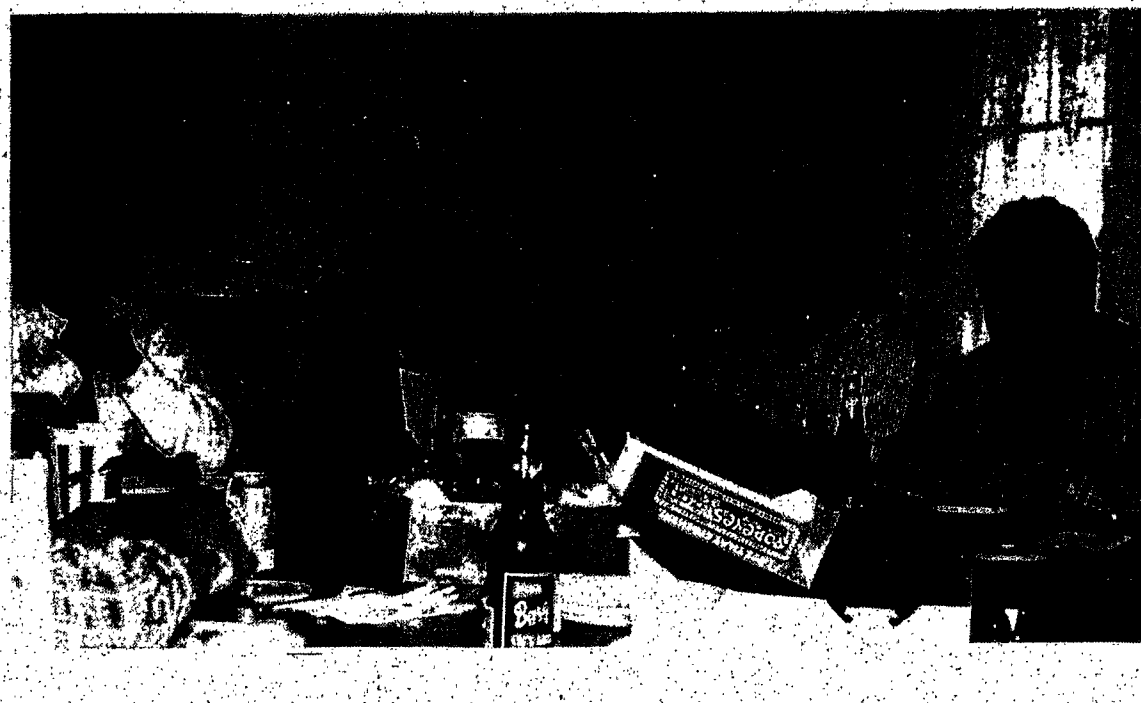

The annual Community Sunrise Service will be at 6:30 a.m. on the lawn of Christ Episcopal Church, Bay St. Louis, while an Ecumenical Service will be held inside the Diamondhead Community Center, also at 6:30 a.m.

The services at Christ Episcopal, a beautiful setting under the live oaks, overlooking the Bay as the sun rises, will be conducted by ministers from various area churches.

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce is in charge of coffee and donuts at the end of the service.

Diamondhead's service will be conducted by the ministers of that community, and refreshments will also be served following the special Easter services.

Easter is the Christian celebration of the risen Christ, and I am hoping there will be a large attendance at church Sunday and at the Sunrise Services, too.

Litter luncheon

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee's annual meeting with judges, law enforcement and governmental officials was Monday. From left are Bay Police Chief Frank McNeil, Youth Court Judge Ann Williamson and Public Works representatives Ron Vanney (Bay St. Louis) and Keith Mitchell (Waveland). The group met with Ellis C. Cuevas, beautification chairman; Carol Vegas, anti-litter chairman and Cindy Vernon, chamber executive director. Others present were Hancock Sheriff Ronald Peterson, county road superintendent Sam Cuevas, Bay Municipal Judge George Lipscomb and Waveland Municipal Judge Walter James Phillips. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teachers' raises amounted to little more than peanuts

Dear Editor,

I'm making a list of all the things I'm going to buy with my monthly pay increase of approximately $30, generously given to me by our illustrious legislature. This is truly "par for the course" for our state.

I feel insulted that my profession, with its lagging, sagging pay scale, was put on the "back burner."

Mississippi has all this surplus money and found worthy (?) causes for it, but the teachers were not a priority. We can now say that the average teacher's salary is no longer $24,000, but $24,600.

I do not begrudge the increase given to the state employees or the teacher aids, for they are all deserving.

In the past it has been said that our state could not afford to pay its teachers. Now that our state has more money we still don't see a substantial increase.

I am thankful for the insurance supplement, for that has been long overdue. If there are those who think it is enough, or that we are undeserving, let them ask ex-substitutes what they think about our pay in relation to our responsibilities!

We must also understand that many of our legislators north of Jackson are not committed to public education, therefore it is not their priority.

The $550-$600 raise is only a 2-2 1/2 percent increase for most of us. The average cost of living raise is 3-5 percent per year.

I must try to be optimistic through all of this and think about the teachers who lived 100 years ago. They accepted potatoes, apples and other items for their services. We've come so far... or have we?

Not if you realize that what you got was "peanuts."

Sincerely,
Sandra Gray

Gambling — some see it as Coast's savior

To the Editor:

Move over Jesus, the Coast has resurrected its own savior. We've been very patient, Lord, but you just haven't provided the excitement, jobs or revenue we've so "desperately" needed.

Our children especially will benefit. Now we've ordained something visible for them to serve, worship and thank. It's a miracle, Lord; our schools will no longer suffer from lack of funds!

Our new god will provide our youth with work, scholarships, summer jobs... all kinds of extras that you couldn't.

Jesus, you expect too much from us in exchange for your suffering and death on the cross for our sins! You expect us to put "all" our faith in your "all" our needs.

In return you promise us life everlasting in heaven. Well, that's not how we want to play the game. So...

We held an election and resurrected our own savior, a sure bet. Gambling has made its second coming ahead of you, Jesus. Now it's heaven on earth for all on the Coast!

Band members deserve praise for hard work

Dear Editor,

Friday, April 2, I was invited to a school band concert contest held in the Gulfport High School auditorium. Bands from as far away as Hattiesburg took part in this event.

When one sees a band during a parade, we do not think about how much time is spent by these youngsters in learning to play their chosen instrument; hours of band practice after school, or the costs to rent or buy an instrument.

So when you see or read about a young person who has done something wrong, just remember there are thousands of others who are trying to get an education and be good future citizens.

We had to leave before the contest ended. All these bands were excellent, and if they did not win, I know they were disappointed.

In my opinion, all were winners, and their schools, parents and directors should be so proud of them. I know I am.

Respectfully,
Nina S. Garcia

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator

United States should stand by Yeltsin as he pushes for Democracy

The legislative battles between Russian President Boris Yeltsin and the Russian Congress represent the latest in a series of ongoing power struggles over the course of Russia's economic and political future.

Along with our western allies, the United States must not passively observe the reversal of peaceful democratic change in Russia, but should use our economic and diplomatic power to support Yeltsin's reform efforts.

While it is true that the West cannot decide for Russia what its political future will be or keep the reformers in power, the mere commitment of western assistance gives the democratic forces in Russia increased leverage to use against hardline opponents. A neutral western position would create the impression that we are not serious about helping Russia turn away from its communist past.

It would also send a discouraging signal to other former Soviet republics which are struggling to implement political and economic reforms.

The current political struggle in Moscow is not a battle between two opposing parties over which direction to move Russia's democratic government. In launching their political assault against the Yeltsin government, Russian nationalists and Old Guard communists have formed an alliance to carry out, in effect, a political coup d'etat. Their goal is to reinstate a centralized economic system and reestablish Russia's military-industrial complex.

Russian nationalist leaders led by parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov have opposed the free election of members of parliament, worked against the privatization of Russia's economy, blocked efforts to eliminate the old Soviet bureaucratic hierarchy, pushed for increased subsidies to state enterprises, and argued against cooperating with the West to resolve foreign policy issues, especially in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Instead of recognizing this trend and implementing policies to assist the Yeltsin government, the West has reacted with half-hearted efforts. Previous western relief efforts took the form of government-to-government aid and lacked any specific policy targets to strengthen the private sector. And until now, the West has engaged in a condescending policy toward the Yeltsin government. It has criticized Russian reform efforts without recognizing the political and social perils of changing from a communist to a democratic system of government overnight.

Russian hardliners battle for the heart and soul of Russia.

This does not mean that the West can save Yeltsin's pro-democratic government or forestall a return of hardline Russian nationalists. But it does mean that we can adopt some basic policy measures to help President Yeltsin's government that have tangible benefits for the West as well.

At the upcoming meeting in Vancouver, Canada, we should propose that Russia's $84 billion international debt and its interest payments be rescheduled. At the same time, we must persuade President Yeltsin to implement economic reforms, which include: selling off shares of Russian state-owned enterprises to private investors, eliminating bureaucratic practices which prevent western firms from investing in joint ventures with Russian firms, and liberalizing private property.

We should support the International Monetary Fund's $6 billion currency stabilization program on the condition that the money is used to stabilize the Russian ruble, not to fund state enterprises or pay increased wages for workers. We should also use a portion of the aid to develop a private fund from which Russian entrepreneurs can receive low-interest loans to start their own businesses. In addition, we should dramatically increase our programs which train Russian managers in western firms on the techniques of private enterprise.

Perhaps most important, we must pledge to support President Yeltsin's reform efforts even if he must resort to extreme measures, such as dissolving the Russian parliament, calling for free elections, or temporarily imposing martial law. We must insist, however, that these measures are consistent with his long-term economic and political reforms, and that they are tied to timely free elections.

What are the benefits of this new policy for the West?

Economically, a free-market system in the former Soviet Union would generate billions of dollars in trade with the United States and create hundreds of thousands of new jobs for American workers. If you consider that Europe — a $300 billion trading partner with the United States last year — has the same population as the former Soviet Union, the prospects of a revitalized Soviet market are enticing.

Politically, a democratic former Soviet Union would be an ally. Estimates are that the United States and its allies can save hundreds of billions of dollars in defense spending if the former Soviet Union continues down the road to Democracy. But a destabilized Russia would force massive increases, not reductions, in defense spending.

Militarily, a stable former Soviet Union means a safer

STREET TALK

What changes have you noticed in the community since the arrival of gaming?

"I've noticed more visitors. I've heard local businesses comment that more people are spending money."

Sand

Scaife suggested the board hire New Orleans attorney Tom Sands, a retired U.S. Army Corps of Engineers employee, as a consultant on the project.

He said, Sands is familiar with Corps concerns and procedures, and possibly could help the county in the permitting procedure.

The board asked, that Mitchell contact Sands and invite him to meet with the board for discussion of consultation fees.

Mitchell estimated, use of sand from the Hancock County shoreline, rather than the Pass Christian location, would reduce the cost of the project by half, permitting the board to nearly double the scope of the project.

LEASH LAW

On behalf of the planning commission, of which he is attorney, Scaife presented a resolution requesting a leash law for the unincorporated areas of Hancock County.

District 3 supervisor Howard Lizana questioned how hunting dogs would be treated under the law.

Board attorney Gerald Gex stated, "I believe we wrote the Attorney General asking if we could enact a leash law under Home Rule and we were told there was no law giving the board such authority."

Gex added, he would verify the matter and report back to the board. The resolution was placed under advisement.

POLICY CHANGE

Approval was given for the removal of a paragraph in the Sheriff Department's hiring policy which forbids the hiring of two members of the same family after 1989.

Sheriff Ronnie Peterson stated, department hiring is regulated through civil service requirements, which other county departments do not have to meet.

According to Peterson, a question arose when Deputy Corky Hoda recently took a leave of absence, and by collecting retirement benefits, in effect, resigned.

Upon returning to the department for work, Peterson discovered, he had to hire Hoda anew, excluding him from previous grandfather status.

By law, Hoda could work 30 hours per week, but not the 40 hours of full time employment. His father, Nathan Hoda is an investigator with the department.

Supervisor (District 4) Wilmer Seymour objected to removal of the policy as relating to other departments.

HEALTH INSURANCE
The board approved the yearly renewal of the county insurance plan with Lockard and Williams Insurance Services of Pascagoula, adding a Preferred Providers Organization (PPO) option.

Employees still have the option to select any physician of their choice, but should they select a PPO physician from either Hancock Medical Center or Memorial Hospital of Gulfport, their deductible and percentage of total payment reduces.

Under both plans, any expense over $5,000 is paid 100 percent by the re-insurer, American United Life.

The health insurance plan offered county employees is partially funded by the county.

DERELICT BOATS

State Senator Bill Johnson appeared before the board to report a bill requiring the Bureau of Marine Resources (BMR) to remove derelict boats from Coastal waters, is expected to be signed into law April 20.

He stated, BMR has requested $100,000 for the initial removal of derelict boats presently in Coastal waters.

According to Johnson, funding will be the next challenge.

GAS TAX REVENUES

Scaife reported, revenues generated for seawall expenses by gasoline sales has increased $10,000 for each of the months of January and February, compared to last year.

He estimated, increased traffic generated by gaming interests as the predominate cause.

"We may have $100,000 to $200,000 extra in seawall taxes by the end of the year, should this (increase in traffic) continue," he added.

BIDS

The board took under advisement bids received on new and used dump trucks for purchase by the county road and bridge department.

Received were new truck bids ranging from $51,000 to $40,536; and used truck bids ranging from $19,750 to $38,750.

Rejected was the one bid received for construction of steel framework, for the Leetown Volunteer Fire Department's new fire station.

Leetown Fire Department chief James Reeves said the bid was nearly double what the department anticipated.

The board approved re-advertisement for the work.

PARKS

The board approved advertisement for the purchase of materials to construct a concession stand and new restroom facilities at the Kiln ball park.

Also approved was advertisement for the purchase of playground equipment for the Pearlinton playground facility.

SOCCER COMPLEX
Scaife reported the survey ordered for the creation of a soccer complex in memory of train fatality victim Scott Demboski is completed.

He added, donations totaling $7,000 have been collected for the complex.

ZONING

Scaife stated the text of the county ordered zoning ordinances has been completed.

He said, included are four different residential zones; two commercial zones; an agriculture zone; and two industrial zones, designated as light and heavy.

He added, the commission is now working on mapping.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

Asparagus
means Springtime

What is so sweet in the Springtime as strawberries, ripely red and bursting with juice and flavor? Nothing, unless it's Spring's asparagus! Then, again, it's difficult to choose from the many luscious offerings to satisfy our palates, isn't it?

Well, just head to our area supermarkets and choose a bit of all these delights, and at good prices as well. Special buys this week are strawberries AND asparagus!

I know, I know, asparagus is available at other times these modern days; but asparagus to me is always a harbinger of Springtime itself, and it's at its peak just now, and on into May.

Some cooks prefer the fat, thicker stalks, and claim that they are sweeter; I prefer the stalks which are slim as pencils. Some cooks use special asparagus cookers; I lay the stalks flat in a skillet, in a single layer, and find this an easy, effective method.

Small, thin-skinned red potatoes are another good buy. Have you ever tried roasting them instead of steaming or boiling them? I halve them, leaving the skins on, brush them lightly with olive oil and dust with black pepper, and roast in a shallow pan until they're quite crusty on the outside, but deliciously "puffy" inside. At times I roast whole or halved onions along with the potatoes.

Broccoli, tomatoes and carrots are also good buys. In the meat department, pork spareribs and steaks are good buys. In the meat department, pork spareribs and steaks are good buys. Ham shank halves are specially priced, as are whole trimmed hams. Bacon is also a bargain buy. Dried beans, rice and canned vegetables are also offered at good prices.

And that brings us to the many, many variations in bean cookery, as evidenced at last Monday's Red Beans and Rice Cookoff at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club.

For example, the "Top Bean" was grand winner GE Plastics, with bean chef par excellence Charles Johnson stirring the pots. (For his winning recipe, check this past Thursday's Echo). His "special" taste treat is this: he "fries off" bacon and adds this to the beans, along with the other ingredients and a few dashes of a special hot sauce (he doesn't divulge the brand).

Linda Kidd, of the Daddy O's team, winners in the restaurant division, said that she uses the bone and some of the meat from a honey-baked ham for that special taste-twist to her red beans.

And Prima Plaque, who headed up the Library team, winners of the government division, laughingly said that her "secret," if any, was the bay leaf water!

That's correct, I said the bay leaf water. She found that she was short of bay leaves when she started cooking the beans the night before the cookoff; so, instead of rushing to the store, she just boiled down some bay leaves next morning, and brought along a pitcher of the bay leaf water for use!

You know, as the saying goes, she "may have something there!" No one would chance choking on a bay leaf left in the pot when cooking was over!

The Courthouse crew's addition of crawfish won them the "most unique" award. And, the "People's Choice" awards went to GE Plastics, Waveland Mayor Stella Frilot's team, and Bay-Waveland Yacht Club. There were choices in the bean pots—from mild to spicy, all tasty.

And, when it was all over, the cooking pots empty and the crowd happily fed, the big winner was the American Cancer Society, and the biggest smiles around were those of co-chairmen Anne Andry and Janet McQueen!

Bunnies come in all sizes

This king-sized bunny stands outside of the Beach Boulevard home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Breath, in anticipation of this coming weekend. The tradition goes, in the wee hours of Easter morning, the bunny comes to life, visiting the homes of neighborhood children as it delivers sweets to the sweet. (Echo staff photo by Jacqui Cochran)

IN AND AROUND DIAMONDHEAD

By Margaret Williamson

NEW CLUB

The Diamondhead Women's Club, a developing civic and social organization, invites those who are interested to join them for coffee and discussion of upcoming events on Monday, April 12, 10 a.m. at the Community Center.

The community can only benefit more with the input and ideas from all of these new groups and organizations being formed. Come get involved!

SNOW SCENE

The Diamondhead newsletter says, "March is for snow birds, not snow!" The first spring snow ever at Diamondhead delivered two to three inches of the white powder on Friday night, March 12 while most of Diamondhead residents were making zzz.

Some though, were out making snow men. With the next day clear, and the snow sticking, the view mixing dog woods and azaleas in bloom covered with snow was just spectacular!

Thankfully, the weather system did not bring cold enough temperatures to do serious damage to the golf course.

Even as I write this, the profusion of the azaleas all over Diamondhead in all of their magnificent colors tells us that Mother Nature likes to surprise us with her wonders every once in a while. Now we really are enjoying a glorious Spring.

DINNER/DANCE

The country club will sponsor membership appreciation night dinner/dance April 17 with dinner from 6-8 and music by Leon Kerner and Catrinia from 6:30 until 10:30 p.m.

Cost is $14.95. For reservations call 255-2919.

EASTER BRUNCH

An Easter brunch will be served at the country club on April at two seatings April 1, 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. For reservations call 255-2919 or 255-1900.

EASTER SURPRISES

Much to the delight of all of the residents of the Dorchester West in Long Beach, Little Easter baskets filled with candy and decorated with bunnies in Easter finery were delivered there last week by Pat King and Carolyn Sapio of Diamondhead.

"Jake" Riddle, president of the Diamondhead Homemakers Group, who meet on the third Tuesday every month, 12:30 p.m., said the ladies decided to share their talents in crafts with the folks at the Dorchester and hope also to make future holidays brighter for them.

You made these folks awfully happy, ladies. Thank you!

LADIES AND CHILDREN'S FASHIONS

The mini-mall of Diamondhead was turned into a models' runway Friday, April 2 as "L.L. Ldt. Ladies' Fashions," and "Southern Child" children and babies' apparel, presented the latest in spring and summer clothes.

Lon Lamendola of L & L hopes the ladies will come "cruise into spring" in some of her bright colors in lovely fashions, and Betty Adams of Southern Child would love to see some babies, boys and girls in and around Diamondhead wearing some of those darling children's clothes.

Refreshments were provided at this very nice pre-Easter occasion.

ACADEMY COUNTDOWN

Those buying tickets for the fourth annual Diamondhead Academy $10,000 Countdown Friday, April 2, were treated to one of the first functions held in the new (almost done) academy auditorium/cafe.

The food committee, Mrs. Kelly, Klenk, James and Smith, did an excellent job of putting together a bounty of wonderful platters of goodies.

The guys manning the bar, Mickey and Bill Kiefer, kept everyone from being thirsty.

Jane Rowland did a great job of securing over 50 gift sponsors and many really nice donations. The setups and lovely balloons and marigolds decorations, thanks to Rosalyn Bowne. Under the chairman, Sandi Wahl; tickets, Lania Cagle; publicity and printing, Debbie Williams; and last, but certainly not least, to Sharen Pickham and the others for the cleanup job, this event was very successful.

Two very excited winners, Jerry Conn and Judith Stahl, managed to keep their composure as the hosts Don Smith and Steve Klenk neared the end of the Countdown.

Diamondhead Academy thanks their Gold sponsors and everyone who participated in this fund-raiser.

DIAMONDHEAD YOUTH

The Diamondhead Youth Organization meetings are held the second Monday of each month, 7 p.m. at the Community Center. So many activities are being planned for our youngsters, but as always, these programs need support and volunteers, not just from parents, but everyone in the community.

Baseball season has begun with 150 registered. The date of the opening ceremony is Saturday, April 17, 12 p.m. 'til, and will include a coaches clinic and big picnic.

Plan on coming out to the East Rec ball field to see these young people in action.

A swim team and swimming lessons will be available this summer. The Diamondhead POA has hired a coach and swim instructor. All you swimmers who like to compete, come out and sign up for the team on Saturday, April 24 at the East Rec pool from 10 a.m. to noon. Call Barbara Gibbons for details at 255-7149.

For the teenagers, Karaoke parties are going to be held at the old 19th hole, and a dance is being planned for the near future.

Six young people showed up at the first get-together, and 35 attended the last one.

Good luck to Ken Talley, president, and all the other helpers, volunteers and supporters of this very worthwhile organization for our youth.

DIAMONDHEAD SPCA

Yes, we really do have our own Humane Society with Jean Keen, president, and Frances Pike assisting.

Your complaint to the society about animal abuse must be made in writing and signed with a signature, address and telephone number. Call Jean for more details and please, love and protect your pets — spay and neuter.

EASTER SERVICES

The Ecumenical Sunrise Service will take place Easter morning, April 11 at 6:30. In a break with tradition, the service will be held inside the Community Center. Participating churches will be the Diamondhead Baptist Church, Diamondhead Community Church, Diamondhead United Methodist, and St. Thomas Episcopal, with the choir consisting of members of these churches providing the music.

Dr. Bill Jenkins, United Methodist pastor, will deliver the Easter meditation. Refreshments will be served after the service.

All residents of Diamondhead and their families and friends are invited to worship at this service which is in its 18th year.

FISHIN' Y'ALL

By Jim Maness

It's time to go fishin' y'all. Alright, already, so the water temperature is about 68 degrees and the salt content seems to be on the way up. Now where are the fish?

Well, it is no secret that the fresh water fish have been biting hot and heavy over the past few weeks, but the salt water fish have not been as active as the fresh water fish.

This is about to change real quick, pronto like, in a hurry. The reports that I am receiving from the passes, such as Creole Gap, indicate that the salt water fishin' is moving into the spring action.

In the next few weeks the salt water action should be ready to cut loose at the inshore locations such as Three Oaks and the Herron Bay areas.

The reports from the Louisiana marsh area, especially around Creole Gap, and the Puffer Key area, indicate that the large specks are starting to come into the Sound in increasing numbers.

The significance of this is that these are the breeding specks that are gonna make "more plenty" smaller specks that will grow fast into the eatin' size specks.

Anyway, reports indicate that you can now catch a dozen or so nice specks and a few reds out in the marsh. The best bait, out there, seems to be cacaoh minnows fished on the bottom.

Since there are reports of numerous small sharks, that are prowling the Puffer Key area, you might wanna give serious consideration to using a coated steel leader. For these folks that like to wade fish, you might wanna bring some peroxide and a needle and thread if you really wanna go out there

Large specks surface in Sound; recipes for sheephead offered wading among the sharks.

Even though the sharks are reported to be in the two- to three-foot size, they can really make a mess of your legs if you don't take the proper precautions — like biting them back when they bite you.

Reports from LaFrance fish camp indicate that some nice specks, and a few keeper size reds, are being caught out by Half Moon and Grassy Island. The trout are responding to cacaoh minnows, grey plastic artificials and mirror lures in bright colors.

Make sure that you check the weather before you go to either the close-in islands or out to the Louisiana marsh. The weather can change real quick like and really make your trip back to the landing an "interesting" experience that you may not enjoy.

The greatest number of fish that have been caught over the past week have been the old standby for the winter months—sheephead and drum. The fishin' piers have been producing a few of these good eating fish, but, by far, the greatest numbers have been caught around the Bay St. Louis bridge, both the train bridge and the auto bridge.

The sheephead and the drum are responding to dead shrimp fished on the bottom around the pilings.

Quite a few people, at least one, have asked me "how do you fix drum fish or sheephead?" Since I must assume that they meant how do you cook them and not how you would neuter them like you do a cat or dog, I have rounded up some recipes from folks in the know.

Ronnie Stiglet says: "Take a 5- or 6-pound sheephead and boil it in seasoned water (like crab boil) till you can take the meat off the bones. Gather the meat. You should have about 2 or 3 pounds of meat off a 5- or 6-pound sheephead, and mix it with two- or three eggs and enough bread crumbs to make the whole thing into patties. He says not only can you freeze the patties and use them when you want, but if you deep fry them you can't believe how good they taste.

Dickie Johnson said that the best way to fix the fish patties is drag them through a mixture of one egg, milk, yellow mustard, yellow corn meal, season to taste, and deep fry the patties.

A further suggestion was to boil some grits till they thickened. Pour the grits into a shallow baking pan and place them overnight in the ice box. Next day cut the top out of a beer can and use it as a cookie cutter to make grits patties.

Drag the patties through the dip mix you made for the fish patties and deep fry them to accompany the fish patties. Dickie claims this is a "poor man's" steak dinner.

This week's wonderful wise words: Don't bite a shark on his nose. It might make him mad.

Do sharks season their food before they bite into it, turtle?

First aid/CPR to be required for all commercial fishermen

Under regulations set forth in the Commercial Fishing Industry Vessel Safety Act of 1988, documented fishing vessels operating beyond the boundary line (territorial sea) with more than two individuals on board must have at least one individual certified in first aid and at least one individual certified in CPR or one individual certified in both.

These regulations become effective Sept. 1, 1993.

The first aid course certification must be from the American National Red Cross "Standard First Aid and Emergency Care" or "Multi-Media Standard First Aid" course or a course approved by the Coast Guard.

The CPR course must be from the American Red Cross, the American Heart Association or a course approved by the Coast Guard.

Before shrimp season gets into full swing, fishermen may want to take a day or so and get certified in first aid and CPR.

This training is offered by several organizations in our area. Contact Diane Stephens, Mississippi Gulf Coast Chapter/American Red Cross, phone, 896-4511; Pat Hall, Emergency Medical Services, phone, 374-7433; or Jim Schenck, Biloxi Marine Training Services, phone, 436-3110.

This training will cost anywhere from $25 to $45 depending on the number in the class and prior arrangements. Some courses offer more flexibility in service scheduling and location than others, so check around for the course which best fits your needs.

Fishin' with Fisher

Bay singer featured on 'Outdoors'

Mississippi Outdoors goes island fishing with co-host Melvin Tingle and Gulf Coast celebrity Jerry Fisher. Fisher, lead singer of the '60s rock group, Blood, Sweat and Tears, resides in Bay St. Louis and sings regularly at his club, The Dock of the Bay. He takes Melvin to his favorite fishing spot in the shallow water pools on Chandelier Island. The trip is more scenic than bountiful, but the views are breathtaking. The island seabirds add a nostalgic touch.

Next, Melvin visits with a Summit taxidermist, Greg Harris. Greg shows Melvin this trophy room of mounted deer, fish, snakes and squirrel. Greg also takes Melvin through the steps of mounting a largemouth bass — from skinning, to painting, to finishing. Greg loves his work, but has had some strange requests for mountings. Join Melvin to find out what mounting job Greg had to turn down.

In keeping with the fish theme, co-host Mara Harmann joins aquarist Mike Stegall, for an Outdoor Discovery at the Mississippi Museum of Natural Science in Jackson, to view one of the many large tanks of native Mississippi fish. These tanks house some really big fish, and Outdoors takes an up close look.

The Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks magazine, Mississippi Outdoors, is highlighted in the Outdoor Info segment. Learn valuable information about the magazine's history, its comment and how to get your copy at home.

Boating, seamanship course offered

The Mississippi Coast Power Squadron will conduct a course in navigation and seamanship for small boat operators at the Pass Christian Yacht Club beginning June 8.

The seven-week course will be Tuesday evenings from 7-9. A $30 fee covers the cost of course materials.

Among the topics covered will be chart navigation and dead reckoning, boat handling skills, marlinpike seamanship, basic rules of the road, and safety afloat.

This is an excellent course for those new to the sport of recreational boating or spouses and friends of boat owners who might find themselves "suddenly in command" during a trip world. If capitalism and democracy do not survive in this land, we will confront, at best, a resurgent, militaristic Russia or, at worst, a number of destabilized countries armed with nuclear warheads.

When leaders meet to discuss the future for Russia, the United States should take a leadership role. In August 1991, after the Soviet Union overthrew the Communist government, Boris Yeltsin, the Russian president, took his country back to democracy and freedom. He stood up for what we stand for now.

Senior art

Baldenhofer offers classes for novices

Photos by Liz Haas

BY LIZ HAAS
Hancock County senior citizens have enjoyed being transformed into artists by art instructor Carl Baldenhofer for the past 18 years.

Baldenhofer, 90, has taught oil painting classes to senior citizens since 1975 and currently is teaching a class of 22.

He began painting in the early 40s. He had three art teachers and took art classes for four years at Jefferson Davis.

He has 19 paintings displayed at the Mississippi Welcome Center on Highway 90. His paintings are in 15 states and five foreign countries. Three Mississippi Governor's own some of his art work and Senator Trent Lott also displays his work.

He said, "All of my students started from scratch except for two had some previous experience."

"He can teach anyone to paint. He's a great teacher. I've learned more in this class in the nine weeks I have been here than in a year under a previous instructor," said art student Joan Morgan.

The artists either sell, keep or give away their work, but most paint for their families and close friends.

Rose Erichsen, a four-year student, said that she had always wanted to paint and finally did it.

"It's really a lot of fun and I love doing it. My family puts their requests in for my paintings before I can even get them done," she said.

Lee Schwarzenbach and Carl Baldenhofer

Morgan said, "The classes are great for people who are lonely, bored or looking for something new to do because it places your focus on your work and gives you real pride to create something of your own."

Baldenhofer said, "This is a credit to the community to have such talented people and this area should be very proud of these ladies and men."

"I don't think you'll find many communities this size with this much talent," he said.

The class meets every Monday and Wednesday in the Senior Citizens Center on Old Spanish Trail from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is open to Hancock County citizens age 60 and over.

For more information, call 467-9292.

Camille Fichter

Pat Garcia

Some of their art work is displayed at Vrazell's and the Serenity Shop.

"This class has been a godsend and Mr. Carl is a wonderful teacher. I knew nothing before I came into this class," said Vivian Neely, a 10-year student.

Morgan said, "The best thing about his technique of teaching is that he will let you make your own mistakes, tell you how to correct it and let you do it yourself, that way you learn."

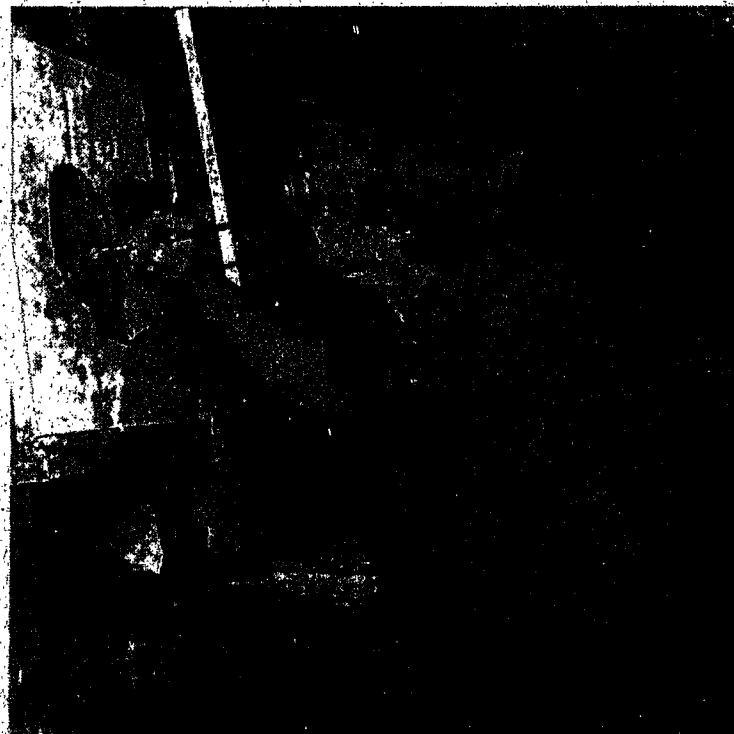

"Painting is wonderful therapy. I've never painted before and have wanted to do it all of my life but never could get started until I was 65," said Billie Garcia, who has been in Baldenhofer's class for the past two and a half years.

CONSUMER UPDATE

By Janet K. Lukens
Area Consumer Money
Management Specialist

Since the Tax Reform Act of 1986 when substantial restrictions were placed on who could defer income tax on contributions to an Individual Retirement Account, this savings vehicle has decreased in popularity with the young working couples with whom I work. However, in many instances, it may be a grave mistake to overlook such a mechanism for building a retirement nest egg.

IRAs now provide the greatest immediate tax benefit to individuals with low to moderate incomes and to those who do not have pension plans at work. For many in these categories, the full tax deduction of up to $2,000 per year of contributions is still available. However, many of those eligible for the full benefit, fail to make contributions.

The Tax Reform Act did not change the rules about who can open an IRA, how much can be contributed, or what happens to money already placed in an IRA. The income earned on allowable IRA contributions still accumulates tax-free until withdrawn, and many people still receive an income tax deduction for at least some of the money they contribute to an IRA.

If you are a wage earner under the age of 70½, you can open an IRA. Into this account you can deposit your taxable compensation for the year or $2,000, whichever is less.

All income earned in the IRA will compound tax-deferred until the money is withdrawn. When the funds are taken out at the allowable age of 59½ or later, the earnings and any previously untaxed contributions will be taxed as ordinary income.

IRA contributions are 100 percent tax deductible for families where neither spouse is covered for any part of the year by another qualified retirement plan. If you are covered by a pension plan, there is a phase-out range that allows you to deduct less and less the more you earn.

If you are an unmarried wage-earner with an adjusted gross income of less than $25,000 per year, your IRA contribution can be fully deducted even if you are covered by a pension plan at work. Then the phase-out begins, and partial deductions are allowed for single wage-earners with earned income of between $25,000 and $35,000 per year.

If you are one of a dual-employed married couple filing jointly with an adjusted gross income of less than $40,000 per year, you and your spouse are each allowed to deduct your $2,000 IRA contributions. This is true even if you are eligible for a pension plan at work.

Partial deductions are allowed for married couples filing jointly who earn between $40,000 and $50,000 a year. Deductible contributions are fully phased out for dual-employed couples who together earn $50,000 per year.

Another opportunity for beginning an IRA account is when an employee leaves a job and receives a lump-sum distribution from a retirement account. Though the majority of young workers simply use the retirement funds for current spending, such a move is costly in taxes and penalties. Distributions from a qualified retirement account are eligible for a direct transfer to an IRA thereby avoiding current taxation and adding to future financial security in retirement.

Casino Magic reports earnings of $9.1 million

Casino Magic Corp. reported net income of $9,097,524 for the fourth quarter ended December 31, 1992. Net revenues for the quarter were $25,001,404.

Marlin F. Torguson, president and chief executive officer, said, "We are extremely pleased with our performance in the fourth quarter, which is essentially the initial three months of operation for our 125,000-square-foot facility at Bay St. Louis."

Much of our success is due to the fact that our facility is closer to New Orleans than any other casino, and it is the largest casino on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

With over 400 acres of land, our ability to develop a hotel, golf course and resort complex provides us with exciting opportunities at our Bay St. Louis site. For the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1992, net income was $5,045,193, with net revenues of $27,138,642.

On a weighted average per-share basis, net income was $1.08 per share in the fourth quarter, and $0.91 per share for the year. The company said that the weighted average number of common shares and common share equivalents for both the quarter and the year was significantly lower than at year-end because its initial public offering of 3,700,000 shares took place on Oct. 23, 1992, during the fourth quarter. At year-end, the company had 8,405,000 common shares outstanding, not including warrants and options for an additional 1,984,500 shares.

Casino Magic said previously reported results for the third quarter are being restated to reflect a change in quarterly expense accruals, resulting in a slightly smaller net loss for the third quarter than was reported in the company's form 10-Q for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1992. Casino Magic will report amended financial statements for the third quarters of 1992 and 1991 in a form 8-K to be filed with the SEC.

"Since the end of the year, our Bay St. Louis casino has continued to outperform our expectations, and has recorded net gaming revenues of about $24 million in the two months ended Feb. 28, 1993."

Casino Magic Corp., a Minnesota corporation, has its principal offices in Bay St. Louis, and operates gaming casinos in Bay St. Louis and Deadwood, S.D.

South of the Border

Hancock geography students enjoy hands-on study of neighboring country

Special to the Echo.
"Our Friends South of the Border" was the unifying theme around which Hancock High geography students developed a program to involve the entire student body in their study of Mexico.

Through research, artwork, music, films and inter-class collaboration, the geography students interpreted Mexico and its people.

A wall mural, posters and maps in the central school corridor provided the focal point of the program.

A highlight of the display was a poster featuring two Hancock High students from Merida, Mexico who joined the student body this year: Antonio and Jorge Carrillo.

Although the boys were tutored in English before coming to Mississippi, they give credit to the students at Hancock for giving them fluency in the language. Jorge and Antonio meet with geography students during lunch each day to give them insight into the people of Mexico.

Geography students also persuaded students from the advanced Spanish classes to teach phrases of the day in Spanish during the Morning News Program. Spanish I classes contributed Spanish music to play each day.

Cafeteria staff assisted geography students in preparing Mexican food, while the home economics department helped in collecting recipes.

Students consulted with the math department in tracking the daily value of the peso and collaborated with the agriculture classes in building a model of agriculture in Mexico.

Each day the librarian helped the students produce a video news clip featuring Mexico and interview spots with the candy made in Mexico, and even cereal boxes in Spanish. A large Mexican flag creates a striking backdrop for the display.

"One day I might go to Mexico, and I will understand the people and their culture better," answered by studying the displays. Manuel, the Mexican Mystery Mouse, promises the winner a solid chocolate prize made from cacao beans from Mexico and alligators from Mississippi!

Kelli Lee, Kent Malley, Christy Parker

brothers from Merida.

The students also filled two of the library's display cases with Ser Mel pottery and other Mexican artwork, a pinata, sombreros, marachas, silver items, pesos, postcards from Cozumel, said student Michael Bordelon.

"I didn't know that other countries were so interesting. Learning about Mexico was so much fun that we want to learn more about other countries," said Jenny Clark.

"We were more into what we are learning and we got a lot more freedom to think on our own and learn our way," said Kelly Dasi.

One Hancock student who lived in Central America for almost 10 years, Stephanie Corey, was invited to speak to each geography class. Her accounts of life "South of the Border" enriched the students' understanding of the people of Central America far beyond textbook study.

To entice the student body to take a close look at their newly discovered friends across the border, geography students organized a mystery contest with clues which could only be
